

The MMTP is the City’s first-ever plan to create a safe and connected, sustainable transportation network for people walking, taking transit, or riding a bike or scooter.

The Campbell Multimodal Transportation Plan (MMTP) is a 2-year community-driven planning effort, funded through a Caltrans Sustainable Planning Grant. The MMTP will help the City of Campbell secure future grant funding while making sure investments directly address the needs, challenges, and values of the community.

The MMTP will create a community-prioritized list of projects, policies and programs to improve mobility for everyone in Campbell. This list will act as a roadmap for the City of Campbell’s investments over the next 5-10 years.

The MMTP builds upon previous plans in Campbell and Santa Clara County, ensuring strong connections to neighboring cities and proactive preparation for a future where people have a wide range of options for getting around easily, safely, and comfortably.

Improvements could include but not be limited to the following:

 Better sidewalks, new crosswalks, and intersection safety upgrades

 Bus stop improvements and better access to transit

 New trails, separated bikeways, and more parking for bikes

 Landscaping and pedestrian-scale lighting

Project Schedule

The MMTP includes two rounds of robust community outreach, with a focus on reaching everyone in Campbell. The public will have opportunities to share input both online and in-person at a range of events.

At the end of each outreach phase, the project team will share the results of community input and how they have informed all plan recommendations.
